HOW DOES THIS QUOTE MAKE YOU FEEL?

“Tonight, wherever you are, go outside and look at the sky. Can you see the wonders? Overhead are countless distant fires, stars upon stars in clusters and constellations, a natural darkness where the faintest colours and lights shine.... Art and science and religion all flowed from our experience of natural darkness and a starry night sky. This is where we came from, this is who we are.”

Quote from Paul Bogard, author of End of Night

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

Next time you go outside, consider sitting down for a while to just look up at the stars and admire them.

Think about where they came from and why we see them in the sky. See if you can spot any constellations* or planets!

What can you do to preserve the Dark Skies for future generations?
